As a resident of the City of Salem and a compassionate human being, I would encourage you to seriously consider the implications of a yes vote on the camping ban tonight.

Removing the limited shelter of a very vulnerable segment of our population during inclement winter weather is nothing short of inhumane.

If action needs to be taken to move these vulnerable people out of the public domain, which I think is unconstitutional, I would think we could wait until weather improves to the point that it's not potentially life threatening.

As such, I would recommend that if a yes vote has to happen a deferment of the implementation of such a vote would also be part of the package.

Sincerely,

Tim Beaver
