"Salem has been known as the Cherry City for over a hundred years. Flowering cherry trees are common all over Salem, but particularly around the state capitol building downtown. Each spring, the capitol mall bursts into bloom. My design uses the cherry blossom combined with a star to represent being the state capital. The blue band stands for the Willamette River, which runs north to south through the city. I know the pink is a bit unorthodox, but I think it

"I found that the current flag was full of great meaning and just needed a bit of a touch up. The star represents the capital of Oregon, and the beams emanating from the star representing the function the city plays in the function of the rest of the state. Each color represents something in particular. White for peace, blue for the sky and water, gold for the harvest, and green for the land and hope. "

"The design elements of my flag, which I am dubbing the "Salem Cherry" invoke a few different aspects of Salem. On the left and right sides sits a blue stripe, which symbolizes the Willamette River running along the west of the city as well as the various smaller creeks that run alongside the eastern section of the city. These stripes also symbolize connection with the Oregon state flag which will likely often be flying above this flag. The central red circle pays homage to Salem's nickname - The Cherry City as well as the historic Cherry Festival and significance of cherries to the agricultural history of Salem. The white emblem in the center of the cherry acknowledges the capital building and the status of Salem as the capital of Oregon. The emblem also has a second meaning, as the eight columns stand for the 8 wards of Salem from which the city councilors are elected."
