I am not in favor of the sale of hard liquor in Salem parks.

However, if it is permitted it should be on the condition that the venders must sign an agreement to pay for professional policing of the event. And that they agree that they take financial liability for any accidents, injuries and other consequences of the event. Plus, they must be held liable for any accidents or injuries caused by participants who leave the event intoxicated and cause harm or damages. This is what would be expected of a business that serves alcohol, so should be the same for venders in parks.

| Message    | Why in the world is it necessary to serve hard alcohol at any city park? What good could possibly come from it? Revenue? Really? How do most people get to and from parks? They drive. I think it is ridiculous that people don't think they can have a good time unless they're drinking. Alcohol of any nature should not be sold at any publicly owned place. There are plenty of bars and liquor stores already. What's next? A cocaine kiosk in the capitol building? Maybe there's already one there; that would explain a lot! As someone who has lost family to drunk drivers I am pleading with you not to approve this. |
